.MAIN MENU

. CAREER

Career mode challenges you to create and develop a new rider over five racing seasons with the aim of becoming the ultimate MotoGP champion. You will be able to choose a team and bike class at the beginning of each season for your customized rider. As you win races, stronger teams will be interested in recruiting you for the following season. New teams and helmets will become available as your rider progresses.

. QUICK RACE

Choose your favorite track, rider, difficulty level, bike class, riding model ('Arcade' to 'Advanced' or 'Simulation'), transmission type, number of laps and weather conditions. Then hit the tarmac and don't look back.

. TIME ATTACK

This option challenges you to set the best time at each circuit, competing against yourself to shave vital seconds off your record. Make your selections for circuit and rider then start racing. You are given the option to have a ghost rider who will appear after the first valid lap you complete. This ghost follows the line taken on your previous fastest lap, enabling you to judge where best to gain time. A ghost displaying your fastest line around each circuit is always available so you can keep chasing and keep improving.

. CHAMPIONSHIP

Championship Mode allows the selection of any class, rider and team. It enables you to compete in, and re-create, the 2008 season. Practice and Qualifying modes are optional whilst options including weather, difficulty, number of laps and handling model are available to help you better define the season.

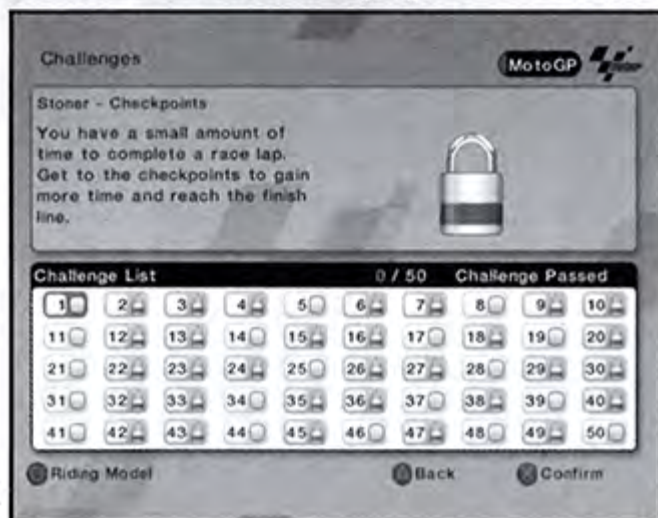

Before each race there is the option to alter the mechanical set-up of your bike. This includes changing tires, suspension settings and gear ratios. You will also be able to check rider standings, see where your rider ranks in the championship and view individual performance statistics. The option of practicing the circuit solo in free practice mode is available.

.THE RIDERS

. MotoGP

. CASEY STONER . AUSTRALIA/DUCATI

Casey Stoner won the title of MotoGP World Champion in 2007, despite it being only his second season in the category and his first as a works Ducati rider. Already Stoner is the 5th best performer ever in MotoGP and his debut win in Qatar in 2007 also made him the first Australian rider to win in all three current GP classes.

. DANI PEDROSA . SPAIN/REPSOL HONDA

This generation's most successful Spanish road racer, Dani Pedrosa served a superlative apprenticeship in the smaller classes before coming to MotoGP as a works Honda rider in 2006. Still only 22, Pedrosa has grown up in the world championship paddock since being spotted at the age of 15. He has since gained a total of 3 titles, 27 wins and 57 podiums. Dani's 2006 victory in China made him the second youngest rider ever to have won in the premier class.

. ANDREA DOVIZIOSO . ITALY/JIR TEAM SCOT

Still just 22, Dovizioso is another one of those riders who seems to have been around a long time. 2008 will be his seventh season at world championship level and his very first in MotoGP. 2003 was his second full campaign as a pro and it delivered his first 125cc podiums. Since that time he has not dropped out of the top five in any championship standing. MotoGP will be tougher, but many feel that this talent from Forli is Italy's future at the top end of the scale.

. COLIN EDWARDS . USA/TECH 3 YAMAHA

Down to earth and extremely likeable, the 34-year old is entering the twilight of his MotoGP career. He started 2008 pursuing a first win that was so close to materializing at Assen in 2006. Edwards has a fantastic record for consistency in MotoGP. He has only missed the points eight times from his 84 appearances and six seasons prior to 2008. He has made the top ten in 60 of those 76 points-scores.

. CHRIS VERMEULEN . AUSTRALIA/SUZUKI

After forging his name and reputation in the UK through Supersport and Superbike racing, Chris Vermeulen enters his third year as a MotoGP competitor and second as a Suzuki representative. The 2005 Superbike runner-up, he has impressively gained five podiums and one victory in his two full campaigns to-date and excelled at driving in the rain at Le Mans last year to walk the MotoGP podium for the first time.

. ANTHONY WEST . AUSTRALIA/KAWASAKI RACING

Anthony West cut his teeth racing dirt-track before taking his first steps into road racing. In 1998 he won the Australian 250cc production title, finished 3rd in the Australian 125cc Championship and qualified for the Australian Grand Prix. In his first full season of world championship competition he broke into the top-10 eight times and racked up a total of 66 points - finishing 12th overall.

. RANDY DE PUNJET . FRANCE/LCR HONDA

One of two French representatives in the MotoGP series, Randy de Puniet has a decade of Grand Prix experience at the age of 27. Although 2008 sees only his third season of MotoGP participation, he is an excellent qualifier. He dropped out of the top ten only three times in 2007 and made a slot on the first two rows of the grid seven times in the last ten races of the year. He will celebrate ten seasons of GP participation in 2008.

. ALEX DE ANGELIS . SAN MARINO/SAN CARLO HONDA GRESINI

Alex de Angelis is one of four new faces in MotoGP for 2008 and one of the top three to emerge from the 2007 250cc world championship. Still just 24-years old, De Angelis entered the Grand Prix scene in 2000 at the age of 16 and needed two full seasons before catching sight of the podium for the first time. He was 125cc world championship runner-up in 2003 but that first GP victory remained painfully elusive and it was not until 2006 and 23 podium appearances later that he triumphed in Valencia.

. JOHN HOPKINS . USA/KAWASAKI RACING

In 2002 teenager John Hopkins was thrown into the deep-end of MotoGP after promising form and titles in AMA supersport and Formula Xtreme marked him as the new major talent in US road racing. It took Hopkins four years and a degree of patience with Suzuki's efforts and evolution towards a competitive machine before he could celebrate his first podium. The American often had to push his motorcycle to the limits in order to fill the top ten on the leader-board. 2007 was his best season to-date handing him four trophies to break him into the top five of the standings for the first time, scoring fourth overall.

. TONI ELIAS . SPAIN/ALICE

The Spaniard, a winner at the 125cc and 250cc level, has always been impatient to reach the premier class. Although he has yet to make the same impact as he did during the four years where he stayed in the top four overall in 125cc/250cc, his presence ensures an unpredictable edge to MotoGP. He only failed to score points twice in his 28 starts during his first two seasons in the MotoGP class, but missed the top fifteen three times before breaking his leg in 2007.

. MARCO MELANDRI . ITALY/DUCATI

Melandri has won races in every category, was a rightful 250cc champion in 2002, and is a reliably fast performer with top five championship finishes in eight of his ten seasons at the highest level. Marco has a winning career that spans nine seasons. In the 2008 MotoGP field, only Rossi and Capirossi boast a longer spell.

. VALENTINO ROSSI . ITALY/FIAT YAMAHA

Valentino Rossi is an icon of motorcycle racing, arguably one of its greatest riders ever, and a visible face of MotoGP around the world. A record-breaker and flamboyant multi-world champion, he has recently waded through his shallowest pool of results. Still regarded as the supreme master of his art in many circles, 'The Doctor' faces a challenge in returning to the top of the crop in 2008.

.THE RIDERS

. JORGE LORENZO . SPAIN/FIAT YAMAHA

It is apt that double 250cc world champion Jorge Lorenzo partly shares a pit-garage with Valentino Rossi for his maiden MotoGP attempt, considering the confident Spaniard's potential for domination and his tendency towards post-race theatrics. Jorge is seen as the key future star of the competition by more than just his followers. With 17 Grand Prix wins Jorge is the most successful Spanish 250cc rider ever. He won nine races in 2007, more than half the 250cc calendar, and all were taken from pole position.

. SYLVAIN GUINTOLI . FRANCE/ALICE

Sylvain began his career racing scooters before moving up to become one of the top privateers competing in the 250cc class from 2001 to 2006. Riding Aprilia machinery he took a Championship best of 9th in 2006. He made a strong impression in 2007, despite only entering the top ten on two occasions from seventeen GPs. One of those results was an excellent fourth position in Japan. 2008 will be the first time Guintoli has raced for Ducati.

. JAMES TOSELAND . GREAT BRITAIN/TECH 3 YAMAHA

The 2007 World Superbike Champion is the only British rider in MotoGP this year. Toseland captured the production-based title before, in 2004, and at the age of 27 knew that the time was right to try his hand at MotoGP. Toseland will be hoping to erase a poor 2007 for Great Britain where, for the first time in the history of the premier-class, a rider from the UK did not score a world championship point. Armed with 2008-spec machinery and the homely Tech3 Yamaha set-up, the British racer carries the hopes of a nation.

. SHINYA NAKANO . JAPAN/SAN CARLO HONDA GRESINI

With six seasons in MotoGP and nine at World Championship level, Shinya Nakano is one of the older generation. Articulate and amiable, Shinya has been a top ten regular for more than half a decade and negotiates a second year with Honda. Nakano is the third most experienced rider in the MotoGP class this season. 2007 was his leanest season yet in the category as he made the top ten on only three occasions and was seventeenth overall.

. LORIS CAPIROSSI . ITALY/SUZUKI.

Three World Championships, wins in every class, and 29 Grand Prix victories in an 18-year period means that Loris Capirossi is now the elder statesman of MotoGP and the most experienced racer on the grid. Capirossi holds the record for the longest winning career in Grand Prix with more than 17 years covering the time from his first GP win (Great Britain, 125cc) to his 2007 victory in Japan. He has finished outside of a Championship top ten only once in 17 years.

. NICKY HAYDEN . USA/REPSOL HONDA

As the 2006 MotoGP World Champion, Hayden was the last winner in the 990cc era before the change to 800cc engine regulations in 2007. A dedicated approach and consistency ensured that Hayden was the USA's seventh number one in the premier class during '06. Nicky finished 8th in his title defense and initially had difficulty adapting to the high-corner speed emphasis of the 800cc machines. He starts his sixth season with the Repsol Honda team in 2008.

SHANGHAI CIRCUIT [PRAMAC GRAND PRIX OF CHINA]

Length: 5.281km

Designed for the Dutch TT and opened in 1954 the TT Assen circuit is a favorite with the riders. Recently truncated to make for a more exciting racing experience, the track features some world-class experiences such as the banked Strubben Corner.

SACHSENRING [ALICE MOTORRAD GRAND PRIX DEUTSCHLAND]

Length: 3.671km

Sachsenring first played host to MotoGP™ in 1998 and the track has seen many improvements since. Numerous tight bends may make this one of the slower tracks in the series but they also result in nail-bitingly close pack action with only the most daring able to break away.

SEPANG CIRCUIT [POLINI MALAYSIAN MOTORCYCLE GRAND PRIX]

Length: 5.548km

One of the most exciting, though gruelling, circuits on the calendar is Sepang which set new standards for circuits worldwide when it opened in 1999.
