Important Health Warning About Playing Video Games

Photosensitive seizures

A very small percentage of people may experience a seizure when exposed to certain visual images, including flashing lights or patterns that may appear in video games. Even people who have no history of seizures or epilepsy may have an undiagnosed condition that can cause these “photosensitive epileptic seizures” while watching video games.

These seizures may have a variety of symptoms, including lightheadedness, altered vision, eye or face twitching, jerking or shaking of arms or legs, disorientation, confusion, or momentary loss of awareness. Seizures may also cause loss of consciousness or convulsions that can lead to injury from falling down or striking nearby objects.

Immediately stop playing and consult a doctor if you experience any of these symptoms. Parents should watch for or ask their children about the above symptoms—children and teenagers are more likely than adults to experience these seizures. The risk of photosensitive epileptic seizures may be reduced by taking the following precautions: Sit farther from the screen; use a smaller screen; play in a well-lit room; do not play when you are drowsy or fatigued.

If you or any of your relatives have a history of seizures or epilepsy, consult a doctor before playing.

ESRB Game Ratings

The Entertainment Software Rating Board (ESRB) ratings are designed to provide consumers, especially parents, with concise, impartial guidance about the age-appropriateness and content of computer and video games. This information can help consumers make informed purchase decisions about which games they deem suitable for their children and families.

ESRB ratings have two equal parts:

- Rating Symbols suggest age appropriateness for the game. These symbols appear on the front of virtually every game box available for retail sale or rental in the United States and Canada.
- Content Descriptors indicate elements in a game that may have triggered a particular rating and/or may be of interest or concern. The descriptors appear on the back of the box next to the rating symbol.

For more information, visit www.ESRB.org

Ground Game

One of the most important aspects of UFC® 2009 Undisputed™ is that of the ground game. In mixed martial arts, learning the ground game is essential to victory, but it might not be as easy to understand as traditional striking.

The ground game can be thought of as a pyramid, ordered in terms of the offensive fighter's advantage. At the bottom of the pyramid you have the Open Guards, in which the offensive fighter only has a marginal level of advantage over the defender. Of all the ground Positions, the offensive fighter does the least amount of damage from here. As the offensive fighter moves up the pyramid by performing Transitions, he gains more powerful strikes and Submissions, ultimately ending up in Mount Up, the most advantaged of all ground Positions. From here, victory for the offensive fighter is almost assured, and the defensive fighter is virtually powerless to fight back. To survive, the defensive fighter often attempts to perform Transitions of his own, which can help him move further down the pyramid, return him to standing, or even reverse situations and put him in the offensive Position.

Using this knowledge against your opponent is crucial to become an ultimate fighter. Without it, you'll be lost in the Octagon™ versus true mixed martial artists.

Combos

UFC® 2009 Undisputed™ features an expansive combo system that allows attacks to be strung together seamlessly to create combos. For a full list of combos, please see each individual fighter's Combo List located in the Pause Menu.

Stamina and Energy

Stamina is an expression of a fighter's Cardio Attribute, and is also the maximum Energy value for a fighter at any given point. Energy is best thought of as the fuel it takes to perform in-game actions, like Strikes and Transitions. The relationship between Stamina and Energy can be thought of like this: Stamina is a vessel, and Energy is the contents of that vessel.

Where is my Health Bar?		UFC® 2009 Undisputed™ does not use Health Bars because a Knockout can happen at any time. You have an Energy/Stamina Bar . This bar shows your fighter's current ability (Energy) and overall ability (Stamina) to fight effectively. You can turn this bar on and off in the Options Menu or Pause Menu.

Why does my fighter move really slow sometimes?

Your fighter has become gassed from attacking too aggressively and/or taking too many hits. Try defending to give your fighter a chance to rest and regain some Energy.
